

Computational Material Screening: Towards Advanced Semiconductor Devices

Jai Kwang Shin – Vice President Samsung Electronics

Recent progresses in machine learning algorithms made it possible to use machine intelligence in many technical areas. And this machine intelligence is dramatically changing the archetypal process of R&D. In this talk, the benefits of machine intelligence in exploring new materials will be presented by showing a few practices and its prospects in accelerating the development of new materials for beyond 10nm devices will be discussed.

Organized by:

